Interior Features and Equipment

On the lower deck of the Azimut 86S, in addition to the VIP forward cabin, there are two further guest cabins with separate beds and a full-beam master suite decorated with traditional square windows. And underneath the salon is a modern kitchen with a dining area and adjoining crew cabin.

At the helm area, where there are three electrically adjustable leather seats; the one for the skipper affords excellent views of the seaway through large forward windows. An impressive electronics array features a touch-screen monitor that instantly provides information on all systems, engine functions, Arneson Drive position, and a host of other data.

Aft of the helm is a large, comfortable saloon with seating and an entertainment area that feature an L-shape couch to port with a table that leafs open and can easily seat eight for dinner. Opposite the seating area is the entertainment centre housing a TV hidden in its own electrically operated cabinet.
